“It is worth flying out to Morocco for just one night in this remarkable hotel, a role model for how tourism can help, not hinder...”

Barnaby Rogerson Cadogan Guides

“...I’m wondering why I’ve been wasting my time elsewhere in Morocco when I could have been up here.....a mountain retreat with the best rooftop views in North Africa. Morocco isn’t short of lovely hotels. I’ve stayed in a few of its most elegantly furnished riads: but none boasts a setting to match the Kasbah....this is the country’s first and foremost mountain retreat.”

Condé Nast Traveller

“...Morning brings a view so extravagantly handsome that you can only smile at the cheeky way it checks off those travel-writing clichés; waterfalls, walnut groves, huddled villages, and yes snow-capped mountains. ...Given enough tastefully deployed resources any hotel can of course look the part - and this one also has extreme natural beauty on its side - but for me where the Kasbah comes up trumps, even beyond its food and unabashed luxury is in the friendliness of its staff. ...The Kasbah is just the sort of place where I could handle a little collegiate bonding.”

Financial Times

“...The icing on the cake is Kasbah du Toubkal (www.kasbahdutoubkal.com), a castle in the High Atlas Mountains, with rooftop views of North Africa’s highest peak, Jbel Toubkal. If there’s a better place to sip mint tea, they’re keeping it secret.”

The Sunday Times

“...The scenery is magnificent. The friendliness and consideration of the staff are outstanding and the Hammam was terrific after the Toubkal. One of the most enjoyable experiences in my 2 and 1/2 years in Morocco.”

Anthony Layden, British Ambassador, Rabat
